Shepherd News September 2022

Royal rush over but hot weather on the cards

BY KIARA STACEY

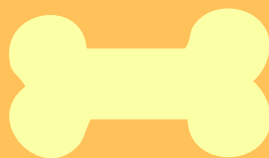

A large number of club members were present on September 10 at the Royal Adelaide Show representing the German Shepherd Dog breed. Jane Pike and Judy O'Loughlin co-ordinated a shared lunch which won the Shepherd participant's third place in the light-hearted spread competition.

As the weather warms up ensure not to leave dog's in cars and keep an eye on grass seeds and snakes. Feel over your dogs daily for grass seeds and check their ears. There is a page dedicated to snake bite symptoms in this edition so be sure to make yourself aware of what to be vigilant for.

The club has been fairly quite in regards to events but the Double Handling seminar was a hit and very educational. I am sure Jamie and Lyn will be watching the upcoming shows to see how well received it was.

Breed Affairs Report

The club is pleased to advise that Mrs Jenny De Lucia has been accepted as a GSDC of A Breed Surveyor.

The current Breed Survey panel are pleased with the addition of Jenny.

It was pleasing that Jenny participated in the Breed Survey held on August 21.

We would like to congratulate those members and Breeders that successfully participated in the Survey.

- Tonaker Ava 'A' 'Z' Tonaker Kennels
- Gilarisha Chicketta 'A' 'Z' R Archbold
- Leppsdorf Over The Moon 'A' 'Z' L Hume

It was unfortunate that one animal had to be refused Breed Survey as the documentation and paper work was not correct.

We ask that you thoroughly check all of your animals paperwork prior to completing an application for Breed Survey.

The next Breed Survey will be held on November 6 commencing at 11:00AM.

The Handling and Double Handling workshop conducted by J & L Phillis was very well attended and was very informative. Many thanks to Jamie and Lyn.

Open Discussion:.

A letter from P Damarell regarding GSDCA affiliation fees was summarised for the members and discussed. The meeting was advised that Dogs SA did not discount its affiliation fees during Covid. The matter of discounting fees is a matter for All clubs to decide.

D West asked why Mrs G Mercer was not given the opportunity to judge the recent Open Show, when Mrs JH De Lucia had judged twice during the year.

Mr West was advised that Mrs De Lucia had not judged twice in the year. He was also advised that Mrs Mercer was not eligible to judge Member Competitions as she was not a qualified ANKC judge. He was also advised that when Mrs Mercer was asked if she was available to assist with taking Show class training on either Wednesday night or Sunday mornings Mrs Mercer advise that she was unavailable. Thereby if she is unavailable to assist with show training on Sundays, she would not be available to judge a show on a Sunday.

The Secretary had contacted Dogs SA regarding Mrs Mercer and was advised by Dogs Sa that Mrs Mercer had not attended any lectures for the year or the Practical handling day.

MEET THE INSTRUCTING TEAM

Natalie Davis - Senior Instructor

I have been instructing at the Shepherd club for 12 years, gaining experience and understanding with training dogs four dogs of my own.

Since starting as an instructor I have always believed that its very important to create a happy and energetic environment for both handlers and there dogs so its a positive and enjoyable learning experience.

Over the past 12 years, I have always enjoyed helping handlers to build from the basics, gaining the skills and experience so they can have a safe, happy and obedient pet or competition dog.

I am also always interested in learning and gaining more experience in training to help me be a better instructor.

At the end of my classes, there is nothing better than to see a handlers smiling face and a big wagging tail

MEET THE INSTRUCTING TEAM

Barry Knibbs - Instructor

I got my first German Shepherd in 1977 in Adelaide then joined the ACT GSDA in 1985. Initially my interest was Obedience but quickly I became interested in Showing (Speciality & All Breeds) and then became interested in Agility when it started in Australia.

I became an Obedience Instructor and instructed at the GSD Club as well as the 3 All Breeds Obedience Clubs in the ACT.

I became an Obedience Steward & later a Show Steward & undertook Steward duties at most Shows & Trials (Obedience, Agility & Tracking) in and around the ACT.

I undertook Obedience Judges Training becoming a UD & Agility Judge. I have judged in five states & territories including GSD Nationals & Royals.

I gave up my judging licences a number of years ago.

I have now returned to Adelaide but no longer have a GSD. I love the breed but I'm now 71 & feel any pup I get will probably outlive me which is not fair to the dog (in my view) but instead my wife & I now foster dogs.

We mainly take old dogs, clean them up with a bath and manicure and any required veterinary treatment. We assess their temperament and do a bit of training to get them ready for their new forever home.

I have decided to become a member of the GSD Club of SA to both share my knowledge and get my GSD fix.

Please feel free to approach me anytime. I'm very happy to assist anyone work through any training problem you are experiencing.

CANINE HIP DYSPLASIA (HD) AND JUVENILE PELVIS SYMPHYSECTOMY (JPS) SURGERY EXPLAINED

By Jenny and Isabella De Lucia

Hip dysplasia (HD), is not a congenital defect; it is not present at birth. Multiple studies have demonstrated that all normal puppies are born with "perfect" hips; that is, they are "normal" for a newborn with no signs of dysplasia.

HD is a genetic disease passed on from the sire or dam of the puppy. HD arises primarily as a heritable condition, i.e. one that is inherited genetically, however, nutrition and physical activity during growth and development also play a role. Purchasing a puppy bred from parents that have undergone X-ray screening and have passed a recognised Hip Dysplasia Scheme, will reduce the chance of the puppy developing HD. The German Shepherd Dog Council of Australia (GSDCA), has in place a Hip Dysplasia Scheme since 1982. Animals that gain a pass in the HD scheme are awarded an 'A' Stamp and certificate indicating that the overall quality of the hips is suitable for breeding. The minimum age at which German shepherds can go through the scheme is 12 months as this is the age when the growth plates have closed. Screening is undertaken of breeding stock to ensure the control/reduction of severity of HD within the breed. Hip X-rays are assessed for various aspects of hip construction and looseness of joints and given a score for each hip. Only animals that score no more than 8 in any one hip, and no score greater than 3 in any one area, are awarded a pass if going through the GSDCA Scheme. From 1982 to January 2022, there have been 10,518 passes through the GSDCA HD Scheme. When a puppy is purchased from a registered breeder, it should have with it a five-generation pedigree showing the parentage of the puppy for five generations back and the hip and elbow status of all ancestors within that pedigree.

Juvenile Pelvis Symphysiodesis, (JPS), is a surgical procedure performed in immature dogs that are at high risk for arthritis associated with hip dysplasia. The surgery involves using an electroscalpel to manually manipulate bone development and stop the growth of the pubis (part of the pelvis) to alter the growth/shape of the pelvis, while increasing the ball's degree of coverage by the socket to diminish hip laxity. JPS surgery needs to be performed on puppies less than 18 weeks of age while the pelvis is still growing. As the rest of the pelvis continues to grow normally, the two sides of the pelvis are forced to rotate slightly downward, causing the hip sockets to assume a slightly more horizontal orientation. Females undergoing this surgery are desexed at the same time due to the impact the JPS surgery has on the female's ability to give birth.

It is being broadly suggested by some veterinarians to owners of German shepherd puppies, that simply due to the breed, HD is a common problem therefore, to prevent future hip problems in their puppy, that JPS surgery should be carried out. Some vets will not back this up with proof in the form of an X-ray but rather a physical diagnosis, while some vets will X-ray. The preferred method of X-ray seems to be PennHIP. PennHIP should be performed by an accredited vet who is able to read and score the x-ray accordingly. To become PennHIP accredited, veterinarians must undergo training and a certification process to demonstrate competency. Disturbingly, JPS surgeries are being carried out based on results of a PennHip X-ray taken by non-accredited vets and many of the X-rays being taken are using PennHIP theory to produce a Distraction Index (DI) but are not PennHIP method. Studies have shown that the PennHIP method has a very high degree of reproducibility between examiners. In other words, a dog should have similar distraction scores no matter which PennHIP certified veterinarian performs the radiographs. This high degree of consistency is attributable to the inherent biomechanics of the canine hip joint and to the quality-assurance training that all PennHIP network veterinarians must successfully complete.

The research-based hip-screening procedure known as PennHIP (which stands for, University of Pennsylvania Hip Improvement Program), has proven to be the most accurate and precise method to measure hip laxity.

PennHIP screening involves three separate radiographs (X-rays).

- 1.The Hip Extended Radiograph
- 2.The Compression Radiograph
- 3.The Distraction Radiograph (DI)

- 1.The Hip Extended Radiograph - The dog's hind legs are placed in "extension" with both hind legs straight, to identify radiographic signs of hip arthritis also known as osteoarthritis (OA).
 - 2.The Compression Radiograph - The dog's hind legs are positioned in a neutral, weightbearing orientation and the femoral heads (balls of the femur) are gently seated into the acetabula (hip sockets). This view can identify critical anatomic landmarks of the hip and determine how well the femoral head fits into the acetabulum.
 - 3.The Distraction Radiograph (DI) - The dog's hind legs are positioned in the same neutral position as the compression radiograph and a Distraction Device is placed between the dogs' legs with the dog on its back. The device acts as a fulcrum to apply a lateral distractive force. The DI is a measure of hip laxity—the inherent distance the ball can be displaced (distracted) from the hip socket—and is expressed as a number between zero and one.

Taken from the University of Pennsylvania (PennHip), "There are no level 1 or level 2 studies to definitively show the efficacy of JPS to prevent or delay osteoarthritis. Therefore, it should not be considered a routine procedure backed by scientific evidence". Furthermore, "If distraction images are not read by trained eyes there will be high variability in Distraction Index (DI) scores and ultimately, the value of the technique will decline or become worthless".

Level 1 studies are the highest level of study - large population, long duration, x-rays performed regularly over the life time of the pet of those that had JPS and those with similar radiological signs at 16 weeks that did not undergo the study, performed at an educational/teaching/research facility with rigorous process and controls, etc. As the standards reduce, i.e. small population with less and less controls, procedures put in place or retrospective study then the level of reliability of the data reduces.

This is the same 16-week-old Border Collie, incorrectly x-rayed using PennHIP under Distraction View – the rods to perform the view are not positioned wide enough. The stifles are covering/superimposing the femoral heads. The distraction has been severe resulting in likely cavitation of both hips (levered forcefully out of the acetabulum resulting in a large air bubble in both views).

EXERCISE AND DIET

As previously mentioned, HD arises primarily as a heritable condition, however, nutrition and physical activity during growth and development also play a role. Exercise is important for a young puppy however, too much exercise can have a detrimental effect. As a general guide, 5 minutes of exercise per month of age up to 12 months of age is a good rule of thumb. Natural free running is the best form of exercise for a puppy because when they tire they can easily stop. More strenuous exercise should not occur until the dog has reached the age of 12 months.

Diet of the puppy is just as important. Studies into dogs and nutrition show us that feeding excessive calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D together with a high energy diet and rapid weight gain that causes rapid growth, can result in joint disorders.

Below is a chart showing average weight relative to age for both male and female German shepherd dogs.

AGE MONTHS	MALE AVERAGE KG	FEMALE AVERAGE KG	AGE MONTHS	MALE AVERAGE KG	FEMALE AVERAGE KG
1	3.5	3	7	27	23
2	7	6.5	8	29	25
3	12	10	9	31	26
4	17	15	10	32	27
5	21	18	11	33	28
6	24	21	12	34	28

Overall, this article has defined what HD is and how it is passed on, whether it be through genetics or an environmental factor. It has explained what JPS surgery is and the reason it is being performed by veterinarians who are usually unaccredited. When purchasing a puppy from a registered breeder they will provide you with any and all genetic information you may need to avoid unnecessary stress and panic by an unaccredited vet informing you that JPS is needed when as evidenced through this article, it is not. If you have any questions regarding this surgery or if you are pressured by a vet, the best course of action is to contact your breeder or someone from your local German Shepherd Dog Club as they will be able to recommend a vet for a second opinion and provide you with any genetic information you may need. The most important thing to take from the above information is this – JPS surgery is not a necessary procedure for a young puppy, it causes trauma and stress for both the owner and the puppy and can have ongoing issues that develop from this surgery. Ensure you are seeking information from a vet recommended by your breeder and understand any diagnosis given to you. Your breeder will always be available to help and provide you information and if the animals have gone through a registered hip and elbow scheme as explained above then the risk of developing HD has already been minimised.
